HIGHLIGHTS

FROM THE “BLUE CITY” TO THE “RED CITY”

While this journey will take you to four of Morocco's most iconic cities, two unquestionable highlights will be the time spent in the “Blue City” of Chefcouen and the “Red City” of Marrakech. Marrakech, with its rich history, lively souks, and iconic red-hued buildings, captures the essence of Morocco's energy and allure. In contrast, Chefchaouen, nestled in the Rif Mountains, offers a peaceful escape with its uniquely painted blue streets and laid-back charm, providing a calming retreat amidst stunning natural surroundings. This contrast between the dynamic, sun-baked Marrakech and the tranquil, cool-toned Chefchaouen highlights the diverse beauty and spirit of Morocco.

A JOURNEY FOR THE TASTE BUDS

Moroccan cuisine is a rich fusion of flavors and spices, influenced by Berber, Arab and Mediterranean traditions. Aromatic tagines, hearty couscous, and sweet pastries are in store. This will be part culinary journey immersing you in the vibrant world of Moroccan food with a hands-on cooking class alongside a local chef. Follow this with an exciting food tour through the bustling souks of Marrakech, sampling local street food and delicacies while discovering the unique ingredients and spices that make Moroccan cuisine so famous. This itinerary offers not just a taste of Morocco, but a deep dive into its culinary heritage and the passion behind every dish.

STAYING IN A RIAD

While in Marrakech and Chefchaouen, we'll be staying in traditional Moroccan *riad*s. Generally rectangular in shape, a riad is a large, luxurious estate with multiple stories and plenty of guest rooms, all centered around an open-aired courtyard with a fountain. Most Moroccan riads are located in the medinas, or the historic parts of the city and were once the homes of Morocco's wealthiest citizens. Over time, many riads have been converted into hotels and remain a quintessential part of the Moroccan travel experience.

EXPERIENCING TRADITIONAL LIFE IN THE HIGH ATLAS MOUNTAINS

Set off on a breathtaking visit to Imlil, a storybook mountain village cradled by the majestic peaks of the High Atlas. Just over an hour's drive from Marrakech, this will feel like a completely different world. Experience traditional life in an Amazigh community, a rare opportunity to connect with Morocco's indigenous culture, where time-honored customs and rituals are still deeply cherished. You'll gain insight into the daily rhythms of the community while seeing a side of Morocco that few experience.
